To the friends of Temperance and the public generally we now make our appeal in behalf of this paper. The publisher feeling it a matter of importance to the interest of the Temperance cause in the District, as well as the general interest of the cause, and having been, as he conceives, Providentially placed in a situation at this time when he can mingle this interest with that of the business men, and thereby render a double service to the community, and still further open a medium of communication by which our principles may be extended far and wide, at a cheap rate. He has purchased a printing establishment, so as not only to be able to put a daily paper regularly to press, but also a weekly; and still further, be able to do any other printing the public may be pleased to have done; and he assures them that they shall have no cause of complaint. He has made arrangements by which he can devote his time to the interest of the office and the paper; and, having employed Mr. Charles W.
Fenton, who will be always on the spot, to conduct the printing, he has no doubt but that general satisfaction will be given. We shall make arrangements to have the earliest news; also the proceedings of Congress.

We wish all who are indebted for the paper up to this time to pay up, as the affairs of the tri-weekly must be closed. They will perceive that we are about to give them a better paper, double the number, at the same price.

While the "COLUMBIAN FOUNTAIN" will be devoted to the cause of Temperance, its columns will be enriched by original articles on subjects calculated to interest, instruct, and benefit its readers. It is intended so to blend variety, amusement, and instruction, as that the various tastes of its patrons may be (as far as it is practicable) gratified.
Commerce, Literature, and Science, and every other subject of interest, not inconsistent with Temperance and morality, will receive the earnest attention of the publishers.
Nothing of a sectarian, political, or personal character will be admitted.

A CARD.

THE subscriber begs leave to say to members of Congress and others, that he has several good rooms which he will let on accommodating terms, either furnished or unfurnished, located on the South side of Pennsylvania avenue, between 9th and 10th streets, and equidistant between the Capitol and the public offices. I have also two of the best cellars in the city, which I will rent in part or the whole, or receive goods on storage.
This is a good opportunity for butchers or market people.

JUST FROM THE MINT!!!

TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

L. S. BECK & SON, would take this method of notifying the citizens of Washington and the adjacent counties of Maryland and Virginia, that they have commenced the house furnishing business in all its various branches, on Pennsylvania avenue, South side, between 9th and 10th streets, where they intend keeping a constant supply of new and second hand goods, and promise to sell on the most reasonable terms. We, therefore, solicit a call from our friends and the public generally, as we intend selling at a VERY SLIGHT PROFIT. We would enumerate in part the following: Ivory, Buck and Cocoa handled knives and forks; White, Black and Brown handled do; Carvers, Forks and Steels; Shovels, Tongs and Pokers; German Silver, Britannia and ANY THING YOU PLEASE, SIR, HERE: OR, THE PERRYOPOLIS DRUNKARD.

Some ten or twelve years ago, the old Squire, as he now is, (not Squire W—) —honored be his title, useful his office, and rich its reward!—lived in a log house, in a very romantic spot, overhung by a high hill, and right on the bank of that same Youghiogheny—of which it may be proper to say farther, that it is a clear, swift, shallow, winding tributary of the Monongahela, falling into it at M'Keesport, some three or four miles above Braddock's Field, and about fifteen above Pittsburgh Verily, it was a pleasant place to us; and we venture the assertion that we remember it with more fondness than does the old Squire himself.
Poetry lay there, like sunshine, on stream, shore, and wood; and projected the shadow of the hill over the homestead, as if to soften its beauty and shelter it from the heat.
There, too, she had a hermitage; up the ravine; between the hills; under the mighty oaks; where the breeze, with a cool jealousy, shook the dark green foliage all day, as if to toss the golden light from the leaves as fast as it fell, and cover it up by the flickering shade on the moist sward below; and where the spring, slipping out from under the rock in the corner, heard the leap and the shout of the waterfall away up among the slate ledges, and sprung laughing into the channel and hurried down to the river before it. But we had better stop this at once; or our course will resemble that of the aforesaid spring, from the ravine into the Youghiogheny, from that into the Monongahela, from that into the Ohio, from that into the Mississippi, from that into the Gulf stream, and from that, nobody knows where, unless it be everywhere? We cannot even tell about "Lovely," the missionary pony; nor about the reverent looking dog, that always sat up straight, and took part in the singing at family worship; nor of the fish gigging, in the dark nights, in the black waters, by the red men, in the glistening canoes, in the glare of the uplifted pine torches, with the sparks ever showering downward, and others as bright rising to meet them. We cannot tell many things we would like to tell; but our proposed story must not be forgotten.

Among the unsophisticated rustics who occasionally came down upon the bank, there was one—what's that was his name? was't it Davy?—Davy?—something—never mind, 'tis no matter—one queer fellow, tall, stout, rugged, careless, fond of talk, and full of fun. In dry weather, he wore good, sound shoes—for then, as he thought, there was some sense in wearing such; but in wet, rainy, muddy weather, he put on old ones, with holes in them, so that, according to his philosophy, the water that got in them might have a chance to get out again. Well, Davy it was, standing by the door steps, told us the story. We can only report the substance of it, as it still lingers in our memory.

There came to Perryopolis, about seven miles from here, to live and work at his trade—we really forget what Davy said his name was, and whether he was a tailor or a shoe-maker, but we will suppose him to have been—a certain Jim—, a tailor.
Jim was an inveterate drunkard. For a considerable part of the time, he was a curse to himself, his family, and friends.
No means that were tried seemed adequate to his rescue. He may have been once very affectionate, industrious, and provident.
In his intervals of freedom from the demon, he may have been so still. But those intervals were becoming fewer and briefer, and he was looked upon as well nigh ruined. One day, in the half-stupor and half-delirium of a drinking frolic, he trotted in the neighborhood of a Glass-House, an establishment with the mysteries of which he had yet formed no acquaintance. Coming nearer, all unconscious of his course, he reeled through the door, fell down in a gloomy corner, and there lay dead drunk. It was not long before he was noticed; his condition truly appreciated; and a rude but benevolent plan formed to save him, if possible, from his degradation. Night came on; and the glass was in working order; and the blowers, with their assistants, renewed their task. The opening in the furnace revealed the awful brightness of white heat; the diffused glare reddened the ample obscure around it; the swarthy workmen moved hither and thither, in and out of the shafts of ra-diance; the molten glass glowed on the ends of the long iron rods—rolled into even thickness on the smooth plates—swung round and round through gloom and flame—and swelled and glistened at one end of every rod, as a wild flame-lit face swelled and glistened at the other. In the midst of these quiet but wonderful operations, Jim recovered his consciousness.
Still, neither sense nor mind was clear; and what little he had of either would have been completely stupefied by the scene around him, if the undying worm within him had not begun to stir, as if it felt the attraction of its native element of unquenchable fire. Jim was alarmed, and, to heighten his agony, a devilish-looking personage, as if excited by the motion of his victim, approached him, with the stern inquiry:

"Who are you?"
"O, sir!" said our hero, frightened half to death, "I am Jim —."
"Where are you from?" again inquired the apparent fiend.
"Ah, sir! I am from the earth!" said Jim, persuaded sure enough, he had found his way to hell at last.
"Well, you see we are all busy, here!" said his unrelenting tormentor. "You must go to work! WHAT CAN YOU DO?"— in a voice of thunder.
Jim tottered and trembled, as if the life were just fluttering out of him, and so, falteringly but submissively answered, in a most deprecating tone, "Oh, sir! I was a tailor, in Perryopolis, but, any thing you please, sir, here!"

The result we are not able to report. It is to be hoped that Jim was saved. The chief reason of our remembering and recording the story, is, that it seems to "cap the climax," in relation to the debasing influence of intemperance—showing that it not only destroys all conjugal and parental affection, and all self-respect, so making its victim ready to fulfil any office, however vile, on earth, but absolutely prepares him, with the cowardice of a slave, and the obedience of a scynophant, to do any thing the devil pleases, in hell!

TO THE EDITORS.

"There appears to be a manifest distrust in your paper respecting the good policy of giving away the public lands. I would simply ask of you, are you willing that those lands should lie waste for years; purchased, perhaps, by extensive companies or speculators, without undergoing the least cultivation? Would it not, sir, be so much more wealth added to the Commonwealth, were every square mile duly cultivated?" A POOR MAN.

There seems to be an honest zeal here, and we, therefore, reply. Lands only lie waste in this country for want of population, not for want of money to purchase.
A "poor man" has only to emigrate from New York to Wisconsin, Western Missouri, Texas, or Arkansas, and he can find enough land "without price." "Squatting" on the Government land is free to every body. The squatter may be on government lands years before they are brought to market, and have trebled them in value, when under the pre-emption law, he can have them at $1 25 per acre, no matter what they are worth.

The public lands now are as free as air to those who choose to settle on them, and with common industry the crop of a single year's cultivation will yield to the cultivator a sum amply sufficient to enable him to purchase, not the mere right of occupancy simply, but the absolute fee in perpetuity.

Where in the world can such advantages be found? And yet would the government say, "No real settler shall ever be driven from the land he actually takes and cultivates, it would take away a fear, and give an immense impulse to settle the lands.

of Languages.
DAVID GILBERT, M. D., Lecturer on Anatomy and Physiology.
Rev. J. G. MORRIS, D. D., Lecturer on Zoology.
WM. ALBAUGH, A. M., Tutor and Teacher in Preparatory Department.
H. R. GEIGER, Teacher of Writing.

The course of studies in Pennsylvania College is as extensive and substantial as that of any institution in the country. The Preparatory Department provides for instruction in all the branches of a thorough English business education, in addition to the Elements of the Mathematics and Classical Literature. The College course is arranged in the four classes usual in the institutions of this country.

The government of the students is as energetic as their circumstances seem to require. They attend at least two recitations a day, and the Faculty contemplate increasing them to three, Church and Bible Class on the Sabbath, and are visited in their rooms so frequently as to preclude the danger of any great irregularities. It is believed no institution in the United States has more exemplary young men in connexion with it. They are all required to lodge in the College edifice, special cases excepted.

The annual expenses are—for board, tuition and room rent, during the winter session $61 87 1-2; for the summer session, $41 87 1-2; washing, $10; wood, $3 00. Total expense, $116 75. Boarding can be had in town at $1 25 per week.

There are two vacations in the year, commencing on the third Thursdays of April and September; each of five weeks continuance.

The summer session will commence on Thursday, the 22d of May. The annual commencement takes place on the third Thursday in September.

The Trustees have recently made various arrangements which will increase the efficiency of the Institution. They have increased the number of Professors and provided for the most ample instruction of the students.

Professor Baugher and Haupt are prepared to board boys and to exercise a special supervision over their studies and deportment, and Parents who may prefer placing their sons under their care, will be secure in regard to their proper management, under arrangements such as pertain to the family circle.

view, embraces every subject connected with Commerce, Manufactures and Political Economy, as follows: Commercial Legislation; Commercial History and Geography; Mercantile Biography; Descriptive, Statistical and Historical Accounts, of the various commodities which form the subject of Mercantile transactions; Port Charges; Tariffs; Customs and Excise Regulations; Commercial Statistics of the United States and the different countries of the world, with which we have intercourse, including their Physical Character, Population, Productions, Exports, Imports, Seaports, Monies, Weights, Measures, Finance and Banking Associations, and Enterprises connected with Commerce, embracing Fisheries, Incorporated Companies, Railroads, Canals, Steamboats, Docks, Post Offices, &c.; Principles of Commerce, Finance and Banking, with Practical and Historical Details and Illustrations; Commercial Law, and Mercantile Law Reports and Decisions of Courts in the United States and Europe, including Insurance, Partnership, Principal and Agent, Bills of Exchange, Sale, Guaranty, Bankruptcy, Shipping and Navigation, &c., and whatever else shall tend to develop the resources of the country and the world, and illustrate the various topics bearing upon Commerce and Commercial Literature.

It has been, and will continue to be, the aim of the Editor and Proprietor of the Merchants' Magazine, to avoid everything of a party, political, or sectional bias or bearing, in the conduct of the work—opening its pages to the free and fair discussion of antagonistic doctrines connected with the great interests of Commerce, Agriculture, Manufactures and the Currency.

Complete sets of the Merchants' Magazine, embracing 12 semi-annual volumes, of about 600 large octavo pages each, bringing it down to June, 1844, inclusive, may be obtained at the Publisher's Office, 142 Fulton street, New York, at the subscription price.

Publishers of newspapers in the United States, by giving this advertisement two or three insertions and remitting Two Dollars to the Proprietor, will be entitled to the Magazine for one year.
